Welcome to SULT Grill House!

We are proud of our products and use just fresh, Norwegian and locally produced ingredients. Our creative and quality orientated chefs are cooking everything from scratch. The food is grilled on an original Spanish Josper grill. Josper is a hybrid grill and oven which means it has the charcoal flavour of the grill and the controlled cooking temperature of the oven. It's the combination of charcoal and wood that gives the food an unique, aromatique smoked taste.

Sult (= Hunger) is a novel by the Norwegian author Knut Hamsun published in 1890. Sult portrays the irrationality of the human mind in an intriguing and sometimes humorous manner. Written after Hamsuns return from an ill-fated tour of America, Sult is loosely based on the authors' own impoverished life before his breakthrough in 1890. Set in late 19th-century Kristiania (now Oslo), the novel recounts the adventures of a starving young man whose sense of reality is giving way to a delusory existence on the darker side of a modern metropolis. While he vainly tries to maintain an outer shell of respectability, his mental and physical decay are recounted in detail.

21 years after Sult was published for the first time, Knut Hamsun stayed in room nr. 10 in Sortland Hotell and wrote the third and last book of the wanderer trilogy Den Sidste Glæde (= The Last Joy). Sortland Hotell was new then, just three years old. That was the start of the hotels' strong focus on culture.

I suffered no pain, my hunger had taken the edge off; instead I felt pleasantly empty, untouched by everything around me and happy to be unseen by all.
